

Customs Law

No. 66 of the Year 1963 As amended by law no. 95/2005

Preface

It is no fact for the keen objective observer that Egypt currently witnesses a great transitional period as well as a serious approach towards development and modernization in order to catch up with the modern societies and progress. This stage requires intensifying the efforts to provide the necessary investments to make this development happen. It is clear to all how keen the GoE is to provide an atmosphere for investment that is characterized by its support to the development process in addition to the GoE giving the private sector the priority and the real chance to invest in the various fields in order to participate in this development by increasing the investments in the various projects.

That is the reason why the GoE with all its different departments and authorities in the Egyptian government is working on developing the policies and procedures providing services to the investors in general and the exporters in particular in addition to developing the proper policies that would help increase the volume of Egyptian exports through upgrading its efficiency as well as the capacities of the exporting projects specially the micro projects, small projects and medium-sized project that constitute the greater portion of the productive units in the Egyptian economy in the present period.

There is no doubt that these matters won't be applicable unless the legislative policies are developed which would lead to the desired outputs. Hence, during the first year for the government in office the Ministry of Finance managed to achieve what may be described as a revolution in the field of financial legislations by submitting a number of important laws to the parliament which approved the amendment of the Customs Law No. 66 for the year 1963 with the Customs Law No. 95 for the year 2005. The objective of doing so is to provide an effective infrastructure that provides services to the investment requirements which was working in light of the economic, social and political circumstances which have all changed as a result of the opening up to the world, globalization, and international merging powers. This made the political leadership call for pursuing that change and put our dear country properly on the world map so that the national economy would cope with the development in world economy.

As a means of support to the principle of transparency which has become one of the main fundamentals for world trade system, it was necessary to adopt the principle of transparency both at the local and the international levels. So, after developing a perspective of the customs law amendment project, it was submitted to the concerned authorities, i.e. commodities councils, chambers of commerce, industrial unions, and some of the public and private production units in order to coordinate the different points of views which are considered a natural result for the economic development movement that the State is going through so that they would be decision making partners. Consequently, this would achieve the necessary balance for the different aspects of promoting the production and trade process.

In order to achieve such transparency, the customs tariff was printed both in Arabic and English as well as the customs tariff explanations according to the harmonized system for the year 2002; in addition to the executive bill for the exemptions law.

Following the same track, we would like to present the customs law with its latest amendments as in the Customs Law No. 95 for the year 2005 both in Arabic and English. It is a non-negotiable fact that the interest to attract investments, setting up large-scale projects, providing the basic services, and giving the private sector the chance to participate and contribute to the development efforts; are all important steps that push the Egyptian economic efforts and approaches forward towards a better tomorrow in confident and steady steps.

In conclusion, I hope that these policies will achieve its prospected objectives, which would be greatly beneficial to Egypt so that we can make the aspired hopes materialize.

May God Grant Us Success,

Cairo /9/2005
